

“This is Real-Life story of Sara”

Sara grew up in a very humble family in a beautiful African country with a brother and a sister. Sara doesn't talk much with her brother, and although she has good communication with her sister, it's not completely open; many things that have happened in Sara's life are kept deep in her heart.

Sara, a black woman, with a slender body, a face adorned with sensual lips, hands adorned with always well-cared-for nails, owning a bold gaze, with a great sense of style, and a feminine walk that always attracts male attention wherever she goes.

From Sara's perspective, she always knew how to make good use of the gifts that nature gave her. These gifts not only beautify her appearance but also allowed her to solve her financial life, finding men along her path who helped her financially. This is the part of her life that brings many adventures to tell, adventures that have their own uniqueness and that I share with you today.

One of these men was Juan, a dedicated musician and owner of his own business. He met Sara at one of his music performances. He saw her dressed in an uncommon way, with striking curves and a provocative look that he found hard to resist. Sara knew that Juan would easily fall for her, as the technique she used to attract the opposite sex is infallible. They started a relationship that lasted almost a year, during which he supported her a lot financially, allowing her to save some money. However, Sara felt that there was a lack of excitement in intimacy, and she gradually became tired of the relationship, which led her to eventually direct her radar towards another target. That target didn't come until one day Orlando appeared.

Orlando, a tall, slender man with wavy blond hair and much older than Sara, was the owner of an attractiveness envied by many men. He caught Sara's attention, who believed that he met all her requirements: he was a man with a lot of physical energy, and his presence left her altered. She knew him little, she had seen him before when she was still a child, and she knew he was the son of a great businesswoman, the owner of a nightclub in her area. He was an only child and had an uncommon intellect; he fluently spoke four languages and had unconventional ideas for his generation, full of dreams and aspirations that were never fulfilled.

Orlando spent most of the day enjoying a pleasant life, living off the money that his mother's business provided him. It was there that he put Sara to work, who had no problem with it and, in fact, felt completely comfortable with her new activity, feeling useful and recognized. Sara's activity in the business did not go unnoticed by the regular customers. She brought new ideas, worked both in the kitchen and as a DJ on many occasions. With Sara's presence, the business's income increased exponentially. The whole island talked about the nightclub, which was more known for Sara's presence than for anything else.

The relationship between Sara and Orlando was excellent in bed. They both enjoyed it a lot, breaking the routine and letting their imagination fly. Everything was pure fire, and they began to feel owners of each other, not allowing anyone to approach that union. Both showed jealousy whenever they saw someone of the opposite sex looking at their partner, and the most surprising thing is that they were both aware of this situation. Sara felt somewhat confident because Orlando's sexual tastes were not exclusive to women; he also felt attraction for men, something that Sara discovered after two years of the relationship. She didn't know how to confront that situation and told herself, "Better he cheats on me with a man than with a woman." I can't help but laugh as I write this part.

When the relationship was deteriorating and about to end, Orlando threw a last card offering Sara to leave the country and move abroad together. She accepted without hesitation, as she had always wanted to leave the country and start a new life. They traveled together and settled in Luxembourg, an economically strong country that offered great opportunities, especially to Sara. She quickly found a well-paid job in a crowded restaurant, becoming increasingly recognized and appreciated by her boss, who acknowledged the charisma she had when serving customers. On the other hand, Orlando did not work and went to pick her up from work every day. Many times he stayed there all day, intending to make sure she didn't smile at any of the customers. Orlando's behavior tired Sara and made her give up. She decided to return to her country one day while Orlando was sleeping.

Back in her home country, they were together again, but everything was different. Sara had lost admiration and attraction for the man by her side. With a little more experience and 30 years of life, she decided to distance herself from Orlando, who begged her and told her that if she left him, he would take his own life. She ignored him completely, as it never happened. Sara again put her radar to work. She dressed in her best clothes, went out, took a taxi, and went alone to one of the best nightclubs on the island. Her intention was not to spend a single night of pleasure; her intention was to meet a man with money, living on the island, who could support her for a long period of time. And Antonio appeared.

Antonio, a Spaniard almost established on the island due to his position as a senior executive of an international canned goods company, with operations in the country, could not resist Sara's charms. That smile, that way of talking, that look, and her sensual touch completely disarmed Antonio, who succumbed to all of Sara's demands. She took the position of lover, as Antonio was a married man with two children. Sara didn't care about the situation, as Antonio spent a lot of time on the island with her.

Antonio was very generous to her and her entire family. He bought a house for her grandparents, had work done on her parents' house, and even bought her a nice and large apartment in a very beautiful area of the city. Sara was happy and delighted with everything she had achieved. She was proud of her beauty and never stopped thanking life for the things it gave her.

But, everything has a price! Antonio always surprised her with small gifts and intimate toys that amazed Sara. They were toys for both her and him, and sometimes he made somewhat strange requests to which Sara ended up conceding. This situation was new to her, and although it surprised her, she also liked it. Sara was willing to do anything to keep that relationship alive. Antonio put her to work in his company as head of a department, and she eagerly accepted. She worked hard, keeping her distance from the boss and trying to make everything go unnoticed by the other workers, which was very difficult to hide.

The relationship escalated with emotions and sensations, and Sara realized that Antonio's gaze shifted when another attractive woman passed by them. So much so that once, a beautiful and striking woman crossed their path, with beauty superior to or equal to Sara's. Sara immediately recognized that woman, as she was a good friend of hers. At the same time, she saw reflected in Antonio's face a burning desire to possess the other woman. It was then that Sara, with a sweet voice that inspired confidence, asked Antonio: "Would you like us to play together tonight?" glancing at the other woman.

Antonio, surprised, looked at her and felt that it was not a question to test his fidelity and quickly responded: "Of course I do!" Sara got up, approached the woman, they greeted each other and smiled a bit. Then, they exchanged complicit gestures, and to finish, the other woman turned her head and directed her penetrating gaze and a challenging smile towards Antonio. Everything had been said! That same night, the three of them had fun between the sheets of a large round bed.

This situation repeated many times, as did countless anecdotes among them. Sara already had almost everything she wanted, but in her heart, there was still something that left her frustrated and eager to resume: leaving her country, living, and succeeding abroad. So she decided to end things with Antonio, sell her houses, grab her suitcases, and travel to Portugal.

Sara's adventures continued in Portugal, where she immersed herself in new toxic and obsessive relationships. Always working on her personal care and seeking ways to improve her life, Sara decided to become the owner of her own business. Life in Portugal brought her new challenges and adventures, filled with intriguing characters and unexpected situations.

In an upcoming chapter, we'll delve into Sara's new relationships, her struggle for business success, and how she continues to navigate the complexities of love and ambition.
